

Fire Danger is forecasted to be HIGH for Sunday for all of Vermont. Gusty winds and dry fuels will increase potential for fires to spread rapidly.

The National Weather Service offices in Burlington and Albany have issued Special Weather Statements for Sunday to cover all of Vermont.

<https://forecast.weather.gov/wwamap/wwatxtget.php?cwa=aly&wwa=special%20weather%20statement>

...Enhanced Fire Weather Concerns Across Vermont on Sunday...

The combination of south winds gusting from 20 to 30 mph and dry soils/fine fuels such as dead grass and leaves will lead to enhanced fire weather concerns across Vermont on Sunday. While relative humidity values will not fall to critically low levels, the fire danger rating for Sunday will be high across the state. This suggests a higher potential for unattended fires from open burning and campfires to spread rapidly, burn into ground fuels and become difficult to control. Winds will gradually decrease into Sunday evening, lowering fire weather concerns. Remember, a burn permit from your local fire warden is required before you have an open burn.

Dan Dillner | Protection Forester / Fire Response Coordinator
Vermont Department of Forests, Parks & Rec.
111 West St | Essex Jct, VT 05452
802-777-3079
Vermont Division of Forestry